

ABSTRACT

A fishing apparatus having particular utility in wade fishing includes a buoyant, board-like support member, a fish container secured to the support member for holding fish caught by the user, and a first bait container also secured to the support member for storing bait such as live bait. Other features of the fishing apparatus include a second bait container for storing bait such as fishing lures and tubular containers for supporting fishing rods and a landing net.